Northwestern University’s Midwest Academic Talent Search

Award Ceremony
September 6, 2014

9:30 – 1:00
Registration: Lobby of Pick-Staiger Concert Hall

10:30 – 11:30
Welcome and Introduction: Rhoda Rosen, PhD, Associate Director, Center for Talent Development

Interactive Presentations

Tiffany Chang is a senior at Northwestern University majoring in Biological Sciences and minoring in Global Health Studies and Asian American Studies. Having always been interested in the human body and international travel, she hopes to pursue a career in the health professions and work both domestically and abroad. On campus, she has held roles in various community service organizations and mentoring freshmen.

David Chi is a rising senior at Northwestern studying Communication Sciences and Disorders, Biology, and Global Health Studies. On campus, he plays in one of Northwestern’s orchestras, serves as a residential assistant, and is on the executive board of Mayfest, a student group that programs a variety of large- and small-scale student events in spring. In his free time, he loves playing cello and piano, running, scuba diving, snowboarding, exploring the city, going to concerts, and DJ’ing.

Connor Joseph Tatooles is also a rising senior at Northwestern majoring in Economics and American Studies. He explores economics from a historical perspective as well as from a current U.S./international relations viewpoint. He is multi-lingual, speaking English, Spanish, and Chinese. He will be pursuing departmental honors this year and completing a thesis on U.S./China relations.

11:30 – 1:00
Lunch: Participants may purchase lunch at Norris University Center cafeteria (next door to Pick-Staiger Concert Hall) or walk to downtown Evanston (seven-minute walk) to eat lunch at one of many nearby restaurants.

11:45 – 12:45
Optional Interactive Presentation: Assessment and Supplemental Programming: Critical Factors in Talent Development, Eric Calvert, EdD, Associate Director, Center for Talent Development, at Norris University Center, Northwestern Room (202A & B). Participants may bring lunch to the presentation.

1:00 – 1:15
Seating: Seating of students for award ceremony, Pick-Staiger Concert Hall

1:15 – 1:30
Welcoming Remarks: Paula Olszewski-Kubilius, PhD, Director, Center for Talent Development

1:30 – 2:00
Keynote Address: Boating through Biosphere Reserves, Snorkeling, Cave Diving - All in the Name of Science

Patricia A. Beddows, PhD, Assistant Chair, Assistant Professor of Instruction, Director of the Environmental Field School, and Director of the Environmental Science Program 14-15, Department of Earth and Planetary Sciences, Judd A. and Marjorie Weinberg College of Arts and Sciences, Northwestern University

Dr. Beddows holds a PhD in Geographical Sciences from University of Bristol, United Kingdom, and is a specialist in the hydrogeochemistry of karst environments. She has conducted applied research in water resource management, scientific cave-diving techniques, biological interactions at the ecosystem to the bacterial level, geoarchaeology, and water-born contaminant and disease vectors. In addition, her field research experiences include neo-tropical coastlines and large-scale carbonate platforms, tracing water and contaminant flows using environmental and introduced tracers, glaciated and mantled karst, and alpine karst. Among her students at Northwestern, however, she is best known for organizing and leading a wildly successful field trip to Mexico’s Yucatán Peninsula, which involved an immersive learning experience including snorkeling in an expansive cave system, boating through biosphere reserves, obtaining water profile measurements from an array of water bodies, taking core samples from white sand beaches and dense mangroves, and hiking through a quarry where they analyzed fresh exposures of ancient rock formations. In her keynote, Dr. Beddows will offer students insights into her research as well as the broader implications for that research throughout our universe.

2:00 – 3:00
Awards Presentation and Educator Recognition

3:00 – 4:00

The staff of Center for Talent Development would like to acknowledge and thank all those who contributed to the success of our 33rd annual Northwestern University’s Midwest Academic Talent Search.

Center for Talent Development honors the memory of Dr. Julian Stanley, professor of psychology at The Johns Hopkins University, who originated the concept of the academic talent search.
